ForestRanger.org was launched in 2005 as an initiative of the NATIONAL FORESTRY ASSOCIATION. The purpose is to bring together people throughout the United States who are concerned about the future of historic buildings (ranger stations, guard stations, etc.) on the National Forests and other public lands.

The organization has four goals:

1. To protect historic buildings with emergency stabilization and restoration.
2. To assist in program development with existing local groups and increase community support.
3. To reconnect recently consolidated U.S. Forest Service offices with communities where the agency has closed facilities by maintaining them and part-time staffing.
4. To increase public awareness of the many benefits of public lands and their history, especially their rural structures.
